

December 2018 Updates

Autumn Equine Education Symposium

Thanks to everyone who attended our evening on Equine Metabolic Syndrome and Equine Cushing's Disease, and especially to Wendy Voss and Boehringer Ingelheim Animal Health for their generous sponsorship of our educational event.

If you were unable to attend, you can find information from our presentations on our website, centralontariovet.com. Dr Stoddart and Dr Hunnisett enjoyed discussing these important conditions with the group. As usual, the question and answer session was one of the most interesting parts of the evening, bringing out important concerns on the minds of horse owners. Thank you for participating!

Dispensing of Antibiotics

As of December 1, 2018, feed stores and other retail outlets are no longer permitted to dispense antibiotics without a prescription from a veterinarian.

We must have examined animals on your farm in order to prescribe medication for them, or have knowledge of your operation through a herd or flock health plan.

If we have not been to your farm in 2018, now is great time to set up a Herd Health Visit and to take advantage of our extended special offer.

If you would like to read more about antibiotic resistance, and the responsibility of veterinarians and agriculture producers to keep us all safe, please check out our page on Prescriptions, and follow the links to read more.

Central Ontario Veterinary Services wishes all our clients and friends peace and joy this holiday season.

We know that you will be spending part of your holidays in the barn, where the work of caring for our horses and livestock goes on.

While our veterinarians will be on call, we draw your attention to our office hours over the holidays:

December 25: Closed – Emergencies only

December 26: Closed – Emergencies only
